

Biography

Toma Mihaylov is an artist that has set out to open international borders for Peruvian instrumental music.

He discovered the richness of Peruvian music as he arrived nearly around 20 years ago, time which has been dedicated to promoting the works of Peruvian composers written for the bassoon as a lead instrument. This historical legacy includes works for solo bassoon and orchestra, piano and different sorts of ensembles. One of the characteristics in these world premiered interpretations is its maximum expression of Peruvian beauty and musical aesthetics that include ancestral chants as well as the energy of traditionalist dances of Ancient Peru, fused with contemporary and traditional harmony.

Since the year 2000, Toma Mihaylov has motivated the composition of several works such as:

“Concertino a Moquegua” by Alejandro Núñez Allauca, “Suite de Danzas Peruanas” by Armando Guevara Ochoa for bassoon solo, more than ten pieces in different formats by Fernando Fernández – who is the author of the two bassoon studies on Peruvian music “Solares equidistantes” that break away from the technical limits of the bassoon, “Amarraditos” for bassoon, orchestra and cajón as well as “Suite Peruana” by Víctor Hugo Marchand for different ensembles of bassoon and contrabassoon.

These works premiered in different international stages such as Peru, México, Argentina and Australia. In 2004, Toma Mihaylov presented the first collection of Peruvian music for bassoon in the 33rd International Double Reed Society Conference in Melbourne, Australia. His solo performance in the inaugural concert in the Robert Blackwood Hall can be found in a live recording by the Radio of Melbourne on video.

Graduated from Rimsky-Korsakov Conservatory in St. Petersburg Russia, Toma Mihaylov has studied with distinguished professors such as Kiril Sokolov and Sergey Krasavin obtaining the title with honors of Master in Interpretative Arts and Doctor in Music.

Since 1995, parallel to his career as a solo artist, he has been teaching in different institutions such as:
